A nature hike, Dutch Caribbean style.

NATURE

Saba Goes Wild in October

On the rugged Dutch Caribbean island of Saba, visitors can eavesdrop on the echolocation of bats in nocturnal “Batman Hikes” during October, which is Environmental Awareness Month. Sponsored by a nonprofit foundation, such Sea and Learn events are led by research biologists. Opportunities this year include collecting moth specimens, listening to whale “singing” with a marine biologist, and going on a geology tour by boat or taxi. Scientists offer evening presentations, often at bars and restaurants. All activities are free and open to the public. ELAINE GLUSAC
