SABA - JANUARY 24, 2017 – Regional air carrier, Winair has launched a new direct route between the islands of St. Barth's and Saba. Operating once a week in each direction, the 15-minute flight departs St. Barth's Friday mornings at 9:30 a.m. and the return flight back to St. Barth's departs Sunday afternoon at 17:20. The cost for the roundtrip flight averages about US $210.00.

While the current route is tailored towards a weekend getaway from St. Barth's to Saba, future plans are under consideration to facilitate a similar route for a weekend getaway from Saba to St. Barth's.

Instrumental in establishing this new air service was Saba's Commissioner of Tourism, Bruce Zagers, who said, "Building a stronger relationship with the islands in the region is one of the goals of our Tourism Action Plan. I look forward to seeing the relationships between the islands progress towards a more sustainable connection."

About Saba - Often referred to as "The Unspoiled Queen," Saba is the smallest of the Dutch Caribbean islands, but its unique offerings belie its size. One of the most distinctive and beautiful places on earth, this five square mile tropical forest soars 5,000 feet from the sea floor of which 3,000 feet are visible. With a population of just over 1,800, Saba is comprised of four main villages - The Bottom (Saba's capital), Windwardside, St. John's, and Zion's Hill (a.k.a. "Hell's Gate"). From the wide expanse of sea, jewel-like foliage and flowers that climb the mountainsides and the charming Saban cottages and buildings, Saba is a welcoming and friendly paradise for people who desire peace, tranquility and beauty. In addition, Saba is world renowned for scuba diving and hiking trails, as well as deep sea fishing and snorkeling. Saba can be reached by air and sea from the neighboring island of St. Maarten. www.sabatourism.com
